Alexion Satellite Symposium at the 55th Annual Scientific Meeting of the European Renal Association & European Dialysis and Transplant Association

Alexion satellite lunch symposium

Thrombotic microangiopathy: Navigating the storm

Saturday, 26 May 2018 13:30–14:45, Room C1 M1-2, Bella Center

Faculty
Chair: Hermann Haller (Hannover, Germany)
Fadi Fakhouri (Nantes, France)
Neil Sheerin (Newcastle upon Tyne, UK)

Clinical perspectives
• Assessment of TMA: a clinical storm
• Differential diagnosis: which way is the wind blowing?
• Treatment and monitoring: is there calm after the storm?
We cordially invite you to the Alexion-sponsored interactive satellite symposium. The objective of this symposium is to create an interactive debate between experts and participants in the diagnosis and management of TMA around topics of interest to you.

Delegate app
Get involved in the discussion by visiting our delegate app, accessible at tmaconnect.live or by scanning the QR code on this flyer.

Before the symposium
Completing the pre-symposium survey on the delegate app will enable us to enhance the meeting by focussing on your topics of interest. You can also ask our faculty questions – these may be read out during the symposium.

During the symposium
Submit questions to the faculty, and get involved in live voting, all from your smart phone/tablet.

After the symposium
Completing the post-symposium survey on the delegate app will help us improve the way we deliver future symposia.

We look forward to meeting you in Copenhagen and for your participation in our interactive programme.
